

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to an ophthalmological preparation containing dexamethasone as the active ingredient and, optionally, also containing the usual additives and water, which is characterized by a content of at least one gel-forming pharmacologically acceptable substance in a quantity sufficient for adjusting the viscosity of the preparation as a gel.